

CLAIM

1. What I claim as my invention is the creation of a universally recognized method of identifying real estate location quality (through specific statistical classification, methodology, and the resulting graphical representation of income demographics using a GIS) as that of my own. I, Paul McMahon, have never seen this or any such real estate location quality identification method that can be universally recognized and graphically represented on a map– prior to this invention by myself.